The Kings Arms apparently dates back to 1759, but was rebuilt a century later by a Victorian architect called William Finch Hill, at a cost of £1,994. The very first licensee on record was William Barry in 1848, and many of the pub's features still acknowledge these Victorian roots today.

McMullen's purchased The Kings Arms in July 2013 from the previous licensee, who was one of the longest-serving landlords at a single premises in the London area in history, serving pints to customers here for a full 49 years!

Above our stunning pub, sits five unique bedrooms, and we're royally proud of them! From a gorgeous copper bath, to a four poster bed and views of the BT Tower, each room has been lovingly designed to delight the senses and provide pleasure to our guests. If you're just stopping for a tippie this time, pop back for a stay and we'll show you how it's done. Ask our team for information about staying with us.

As you can probably tell, we're extremely proud of our pub with boutique rooms, and want to ensure you have a truly tremendous time during your visit or stay. We're here if you need us for anything so enjoy your visit, enjoy this beloved city and enjoy a right royal time at The Kings Arms.
